

Spotting the signs of potential workplace triggers for distress

People working long hours and not taking a break

Unrealistic expectations or deadlines

High-pressure environments

Unmanageable workloads or lack of control over work

Negative relationships or poor communication

An unsupportive workplace culture or lack of management support

Job insecurity or poor change management

High risk roles